For these four Psychologist Staff I and the one Mental Health Clinician I positions, we are seeking culturally-proficient professionals to continue our emphasis on services to students who may be marginalized or minoritized, particularly African Americans or others who have been historically under-represented and/or less likely to access UKCC as a resource. No specific diagnostic area of clinical expertise is required, as we are seeking strong generalists who have experience serving diverse (broadly defined) clients – preferably college students.

The University of Kentucky Counseling Center (UKCC) is committed to inclusive excellence, welcoming a wide range of clients for psychological services and those seeking consultation. Our staff is diverse in many ways and we strive to mirror the population we serve in the UK community. UKCC supports students in ways that affirm all of their identities, and recognizes the importance of intersectionality. We welcome candidates who will continue to expand our reach to marginalized and under-represented students, including but not limited to persons of color, international, first-generation, veterans, those with disabilities, and LGBTQ*. All UKCC clinicians provide direct psychological services and programming in the areas of personal concerns, academic success, and career exploration/decision-making, as well as providing outreach, crisis intervention, consultation services, and training of doctoral students in Clinical or Counseling Psychology. These functions support the Center and University mission of retention and the success of our students.

Our ideal candidate possesses an understanding of intersectionality and how it impacts the daily lives of students. Cultural competence is of utmost importance. We seek individuals who are collaborative in nature, have strong communication skills, practice good self-care, maintain healthy boundaries, and possess the ability to manage a challenging workload while promoting a positive atmosphere and healthy relationships.

The University of Kentucky is the land-grant flagship university for the state. It is a major research institution with over 30,000 students and 16 academic colleges. In addition to the undergraduate and graduate programs, the campus includes professional programs within the Colleges of Medicine, Law, Health Sciences, Pharmacy and Dentistry and the University Medical Center/Chandler Hospital. UK offers excellent health and retirement benefits. UK is located in Lexington, a growing community of approximately 300,000 surrounded by beautiful Bluegrass horse farms. Lexington offers many opportunities for recreational and cultural activities and is within comfortable driving distance to larger metropolitan areas such as Louisville, Cincinnati, Columbus and Nashville. With recent expansion and renovation of our facilities along with the good news of our doctoral internship receiving full APA accreditation in 2015, it is an exciting time to be part of the University of Kentucky Counseling Center.
